It wouldn't be hard to make all of that happen. If you don't mind amateurs.

Can we? Can we? Let's, please! (Hey, if we invite Artful, do you think he'd bring his wife? I think he's making her up.)

I wanted to leave uninhabited clothes laid out on bus benches and Metro platforms, but I wasn't sure what I'd say when I got arrested for littering. Dad would probably be fine with it, but Dad's Boss might think it was behavior unbecoming a Federal Employee.

Wife and kid, right? Sure. Think the Cowboy will come if we tell him he can bring the guitarist?

Betcha he would. Impromptu family party FTW!

I'll call Wonder Woman if you call Dad.

Will you blush and stammer? Because I want to be there to watch.

Artful, Missus Artful, and the Artlet are up for it. T. has returned with rather a lot of Maiwein (it's in the freezer, preparing for its bath of ice-and-water slosh in the cooler) and a total score of organic local strawberries ("They fell off a truck," she told me, with the straightest of faces).

If you did lay out the clothes, I bet the homeless population would put 'em to use.

That's so. Maybe they'd cover up my criminal acts!

Also, this may be the last good weather we see for a week, depending. Thunderstorms on NOAA's strong-definite-maybe list. Can you imagine what it would be like to date a meteorologist? "There's a 70 percent chance that I love you. Dropping to 50 percent if you don't let go of that remote. Possibility of sex by morning."

<Strangled Meep!> Don't do that to me, the neighbours think I'm strange enough without maniacal laughter echoing from the house 9AM on a Sunday morning.

Bwah-hah-hah! You laugh because it's TRUE.

...That?

That was a darned fine picnic.

Also some surprisingly good singing. (Who knew that the Cowboy, the Guitar Player, and Artful all knew Lyle Lovett's "God Will" by heart? And will Artful be promoted if news of his deadpan version of Randy Newman's "Political Science" gets back to his boss?)

(I do not mention that a certain friend of mine sang real good, on account of he embarrasses easily.)

Now THAT is how you run a company picnic.
